Chablé

Just twenty-five minutes from the historic city of Mérida, the Chablé Resort is spread across over 300 hectares of primeval Mayan forest. Forty sumptuous villas each with private pools and luxe amenities make up the resort, whilst the crowning jewel is certainly the spa built beside a cenote – a natural cave formation believed to be sacred by the Mayans. The region's unique culture and history is just a stone's throw away from the property. You'll be tempted to stick around all day, though, feasting on organic and seasonal fare sourced directly from the on-site gardens and the fruits of the Yucatan peninsula or even sampling libations from the resort's cellar, which features the largest private tequila collection in the world.

Yoo2

In the hip Botafogo neighbourhood of Rio de Janeiro is a new design hotel with rooms that include views of Corcovado (Christ the Redeemer), Sugar Loaf Mountain or the beach as the backdrop. Enveloped with street art-inspired furniture and ceiling prints, generous space and flexible design allow guests to rearrange rooms to their liking. The rooftop bar serves up inventive cocktails and the sounds of regular DJ sets against a panorama of the city. Cariocally, the onsite restaurant, has a seasonally changing menu that pairs authentic local flavours with one of the largest wine selections in the city. If guests prefer to leave the property, a well-connected concierge team will ensure access to the best bars and clubs in Rio.

Outdoor activities include bicycle tours of street art and guided morning runs.

The Ranch at Laguna Beach

Nestled in the quintessential Californian beachside community, The Ranch is a ninety-seven-room property housed on the historic Thurston homestead – established in 1871. Wood-clad walls and ranch-style furnishings nod to the property's rustic beginnings, though the plush amenities leave few desire unfulfilled. The property is also home to Laguna Beach's only golf course, a nine-hole, par-thirty-two course carved into the Aliso and Woods canyons. With a range of activities for the entire family, The Ranch perfectly embodies the cool Southern Californian lifestyle.
