TRAVEL & RECREATION

The entrance at Chablé sets the tone at this historic property, which sits on a former sisal plantation.

MAGNIFICENTE MERIDA Creating a resort on a historic property can be a daunting task, but at Chablé, a luxurious Mexican property about 50 minutes outside Mérida, the team has nailed it. Guests arrive at a 19th-century manor house, an age-old building set on 750 acres of a former sisal—or agave—plantation. Accommodations, however, are very much of the 21st century. Outside, individual pool villas are surrounded by lush greenery, outdoor showers and hammocks; and inside, floor-to-ceiling windows make it seem like you're sleeping in the jungle. A world-class spa features Mayan-inspired treatments, as well as yoga and meditation, and the opportunity to have a healing session with a shaman. Wellness extends to culinary offerings from the regional, seasonal cuisine (much of it sourced from the resort's own garden) to the daily juice offered at breakfast to the extensive wine and tequila offerings (be sure to try the house añejo). For those who want to venture outside the property, the beaches of Celestún and incredible Mayan ruins of Uxmal are only a short drive away. Rates from $1,040 per night, including breakfast, chablemexico.com —Rina Sugi
